

ORNITHOLOGY

Editor

Randall L. Shore, BU 1712

Since this is the first new issue listing of 2005, I want to explain the far right column in the new issue listings. I use a letter code (A*, B*, or C*) following the issue description. This is the same code first used in ATA Handbook 106, Birds of the World in Philately, as follows:

- A = one species of bird as the sole or central subject of the stamp(s);
- B = two or more species of birds as the major subjects, or one species as an important but not sole or central element of the design;
- C = one or more species of bird(s) as a small or extraneous part of the design;
- * = the bird(s), but not necessarily the rest of the design, shown in color.

I also use the far right column to designate if the species shown on the stamp is new to our Philatelic Aviary. That is, it has never been depicted on a previous stamp issue. I use two designations as follows:

- NEW = new species on stamp not previously reported in Biophilately;
- V51(1) = new species on stamp previously reported as an uncataloged issue in the Philatelic Aviary section of Biophilately Volume 51 #1. This happens when the Philatelic Aviary editor publishes the species information before the Ornithology editor publishes the issue information. This designation then becomes a cross reference between two volumes of Biophilately for the same stamp.

Also I will be addressing a number of omissions and/or errors that probably occurred when I took over as Ornithology editor and did not have backlog information from the previous editor or when I took a short hiatus to move from Massachusetts to Maryland and then to Virginia. One of our members has given me an extensive listing of these omissions/errors which I will include in this issue.
